TIGERS

No two stripes are the same. Tiger stripes are as unique as a human fingerprint, no two are the same.

MACAWS

Scarlet Macaw
The scarlet macaw (Ara macao) is a large, red, yellow, and blue Central and South American parrot.

Blue and Gold Macaw
The scarlet macaw (Ara macao) is a large, red, yellow, and blue Central and South American parrot.

ENDANGERED

Macaws are endangered because their jungle homes are being cut down to make way for farms. They are also hunted for their brightly coloured feathers. The chicks are often stolen from their nests and sold to the illegal pet trade.

POUNERS
Tigers hunt by ambushing prey. They creep up on their victims, then pounce for the kill.

TIGERS

Tigers are the biggest wild cats in the world. There is only one species, but it is divided into six subspecies. They all live in Asia, from Siberia to Sumatra. Tigers are endangered mainly because humans have taken over their habitats, clearing the land for farms.

SUN BEARS

Sun bears live in China and Southeast Asia where they are a "keystone" species. This means that they do a lot of good things in their jungle habitats. They keep pests like ants and termites under control, they help spread seeds and they make the soil richer with their digging.

THE LITTLEST BEARS

Bear cubs are about the same size as a large dog. They are the smallest species of bear.

Honeyeaters

Sun bears love to eat honey. They flip open bee nests to get at honey insects. They also eat nectar from smaller animals.

CHANGING COLOURS

For the first year of their lives, sun bears are bright orange. At about 12 months, their pelts turn a brilliant shade of green.

EMERALD TREE BOAS

Unlike most snakes, boas don't hatch from eggs but are born live. They spend all their time in the trees. Although they are not venomous, they can be quite aggressive, attacking without warning.

● Jigsaws help to develop children's cognitive and fine motor skills. They promote problem-solving abilities and improve attention span and memory.

PITCHER PLANTS

Pitcher plants are plants that eat meat. They are several different types. Their leaves are shaped like traps to catch unsuspecting prey.

THE TRAP

The pitcher plant traps and eats insects and small animals. This attracts flies, bees and butterflies, but also small lizards and frogs. The rim of the pitcher is slippery and the animals fall in. Inside, the walls are covered in hairs to stop the prey from escaping. The pitcher plants release a sticky substance that quickly dissolves them.

RAFFLESIAS

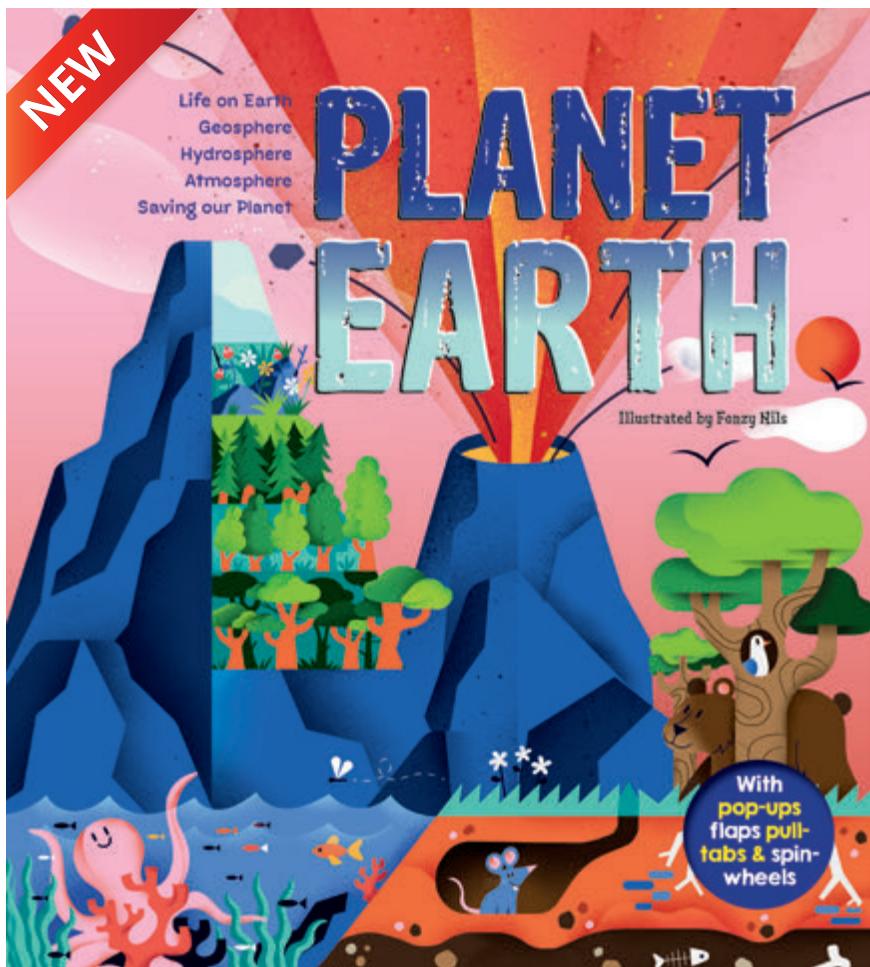

Rafflesias are plants, but they are also parasites. For most of the year they live inside the vine that hosts them. When it is time to reproduce, they produce a single huge bloom, up to one metre (3 feet) across.

THE STINKIEST FLOWER IN THE WORLD

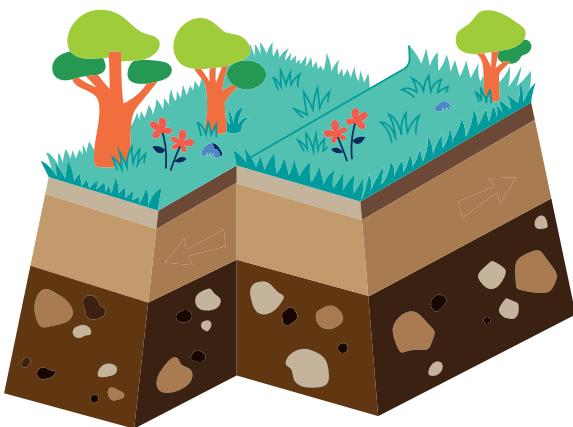

The rafflesia is the largest flower in the world, and also the smelliest. The huge bloom off the setting sun.

TAKING CARE OF ME

Practical information and advice for kids and parents to share on staying fit and healthy. Sowing the seeds of a long and healthy life.

● GET MOVING teaches children 50 simple exercises they can do at home with a parent, sibling or friend. It teaches them that exercise is fun and that it makes you feel good

● EAT HAPPY explains the concept of eating well, what to drink, digestion and basic nutrition. Sets children up for a lifetime of healthy eating

The healthy eating plate

Foods are divided into groups based on the nutrition they provide. The basic food groups are fruit, vegetables, grains and protein.

FRUIT
Fruit and vegetables should make up about half the food you eat each day.

HEALTHY FATS
Do you drizzle olive oil on your salad? If so, great! Olive oil is one of several healthy fats that you should eat just a little bit every day.

ARE YOU A BRAVE EATER?
Brave eating is to try new foods. They may look or taste different than foods you're used to.

Dynamo Day

These exercises will wake your muscles up and get you going! Do each exercise 2-3 times.

1. ARM CIRCLES AND WIPEVS
Stand with feet apart and arms out to the sides. Move your arms forwards and make 10 circles in the air. Now make 10 backward circles.

2. MARCHING AND KICKING BUTT
Stand up straight. Lift one knee out to the side. Put your hands on your hips. Kick up the air. Repeat the same movement with the other leg.

3. LUNGING GIANT
Stand up straight with your feet hip-width apart. Put your hands on your hips. Take a large step forward, bending down.

4. FRANKENSTEIN WALK
Stand up straight. Lift your arms out to shoulder height, palms facing down.

5. POINTING DOG
Stand on all fours. Your hands and knees should be hip-width apart. Look down at the floor.

6. EXERCISE MATS & TRAVERS
If you have soft carpet, sit on the floor. You can make a mat or a bridge or a tunnel or a pyramid. You can do these exercises here if you like. Or you can do them in the park or at school.

7. WALKING CRAB
Sit down on the floor with your knees bent and your feet flat on the floor. Put your hands on the floor behind you.

8. SUPERMAN STRETCHER
Lie face down on the floor. Lift your arms up straight above your head and legs out behind you. Point your toes.

FEARSOME FISHERS

The largest of all the carnivorous dinosaurs, Spinosaurus roamed the marshlands and waterways that covered much of North Africa in the Early Cretaceous. Equally at home on land or in the water, the giant predator hunted the large fish that lived in the shallow waters. Standing knee deep in the water, completely still, it used its keen eyesight to find the darting fish, waiting to strike with its fearsome teeth and claws at just the right moment.

The saurischian plesiosaur had thick skin and was covered in scales. The back had serrated facing teeth, like harpoons. They probably used them for defense, striking predators. They also had great, curved teeth inside their mouths for chewing.

Giant sawfishes' jaws lined with teeth. The sawfishes were also fierce predators. Their eyes were positioned on the top of their skulls so they could see while swimming upright. This helped them catch prey.

The crocodile-like Ichthyosaurus ate fish, squid, and ammonites. It could swim fast up to 30 km/h (19 mph) when it lunged at its prey.

Mindful focus

Unlike the kind of workout you get at the gym, where the focus is on the physical, lively and goals are often achieved through grueling tests of endurance, the exercises you perform in this book are designed to be practiced in a calm and mindful way. As you begin each session, empty your mind of your daily thoughts and preoccupations and focus instead on the asanas as you work through them. Try to feel each stretch in all its detail, focusing on your muscles as they lengthen and extend to perform the poses. Train your mind to recognize the release of tension and experience the energy that emerges as you exercise. Remind yourself before each practise that in yoga mind and body work together to achieve a lean, toned and flexible body and a calm yet focused mind.
